THE COURSE

The Edition'21 of the Advance Conflict Resolution Program offered by the University of Florence School of Law Legal Sciences Department, is focused on the principle of parties' self-determination in mediated processes. Self-determination is currently claimed as a foundation premise of any neutral's intervention; however, it often results overshadowed, in practice, as a result of pre-eminence given to other aims, namely reaching a satisfactory settlement, protecting a weak party, satisfy the success rates within the frame of a dispute management scheme.

The course has been arranged as a two-day event, including lectures by eminent scholar and expert in the field coupled with practice and taken-from-life experiences. The aim is to offer delegates a wide survey of the way self-determination is respected or not, and directiveness employed in various conflict arenas.

The course is organized by the University of Florence in co-operation with the ISCT, Institute for the Study of Conflict Transformation, the think-tank of transformative mediation, and AMT, the Italian Association of Transformative Mediation and Forma Mentis.

As an introduction, Carlo Mosca, a practitioner and a member of the ISCT board, will give an overview on how directiveness may vary in accordance with the neutral's worldview, and approach to conflict.

Day One (DO) is intended to cover two specific conflict environments: communal/intergroup (morning), and family (afternoon). The morning session will be led by Giovanni Scotto, professor of Sociology at the University of Florence, and Marianella Scavi, an expert of urban ethnography and conflicts; the afternoon session, by Dan Simon and Adriana Capozzoli, both lawyers and practicing mediators.

Day Two (DT) will be devoted to transformation of conflict within organizations (with Friedrich Glasl, actual visiting Professor at the University of Tbilisi, and Anja Corinne Baukloh, social researcher and practitioner) and in business disputes (with the mediator Carlo Mosca challenged by Paola Lucarelli, professor of Commercial law at the University of Florence School of Law, and Ettore Maria Lombardi, professor of Private law at the University of Florence School of Law, Pietro Galizzi, Head of Legal, Regulatory and Compliance Affairs at Eni gas e luce S.p.A. and Simona Righini, Legal Counsel at Eni gas e luce S.p.A.).

Finally, a special keynote on individual agency and mediation will be held by Robert A. Baruch Bush and Peter F. Miller. Bush is Harry H. Rains Distinguished Professor of Alternative Dispute Resolution Law at Hofstra University School of Law (Hempstead, New York), who is one of the most prominent and worldwide recognized pioneer of transformative model of mediation. Miller is a highly experienced transformative mediator in private practice in the New York metropolitan area, and he is an Adjunct Professor of Mediation at the Maurice A. Deane School of Law at Hofstra University.

The course is held in English and Italian with simultaneous translation.
